There were other candidates and the fight was a lively one. Captain White paid several visits to Washington in the interest of his candidacy and made a very favorable impression on the Postmaster-General.

The other post-office appointment for Virginia was that of Emmet M. Morrison, at Smithfield, Isle of Wight county, and he is spoken of as a most worthy gentleman, who had the endorsement of Congressman Tyler.

The long contest over the postmaster-

After some unimportant business, Mr. Grzy moved to proceed to consideration of the House bill to repeal all statutes relating to supervisors of election and special deputy marshals. He yielded, however, to the suggestion of Mr. Chandlef to let the bill go over to Monday—Mr. Chandler stating that the views of the minority of the committee had not been printed. Mr. Gray suggested in a playful manner that perhaps Mr. Hoar, who had taken part in the colloquy, might have religious scruples about transacting business on "Jackson-Day"—Monday being the 8th of January.

"Well," said Mr. Hoar, "I should like to keep before the country the example of that distinguished Democrat—both in the matter of submitting to the laws of the country in all parts of the Union, and in the matter of his very wise and admirable views on protection. Between 1 and 2 o'clock this morning the family of Mr. T. G. Campbell, an engineer on the Norfolk and Western railroad, on Main street, were aroused from sleep by smoke, and found one side of their house ablaze. Here, also, the flames were extinguished without serious damage, but the same evidences of malice as in the former case—cotton saturated with oil—were found. The belief is that both houses were set on fire by some tramps who had been to the places demanding food and in both instances had been reparties it is ascertained that they left the village this morning, saying they were going to Norfolk.
